

In the en-suites the limestone tiles are from Topps Tiles and the white suites are by Ideal Standard.

Above: The ottoman is by What Not Antiques and the wool carpet is from Laura Ashley. Below: The bedside cabinet and drawers are from Englishman's Castle. The bed linen is from Marks and Spencer.

is keep all the lines running the same way. All the handles on the drawers and cupboards are parallel. These are just little design features, but they make a difference," she says.

The family room is one of Paula's favourites. It's small and cosy, with an eclectic mixture of furnishings and accessories. "I love it because it's filled with bits and pieces from our previous home that didn't quite fit anywhere else in the house, but it works. It's so cosy."

Again, one wall is accented with Harlequin wallpaper and the leather sofa, the curtains and the wool rug are from Marks and Spencer.

In the dining room the round mahogany table, chairs and sideboard are all from MultiYork's Chateau range. Again the walls are in a neutral, parchment colour and the darker mushroom of the curtains is in perfect contrast.

Upstairs in the master bedroom, Paula has put colour to dramatic effect by using splashes of crimson to accessorise. She explains: "This room was very white and pink. It just needed clearing out, opening up and neutralising. The first attempt was to paint the walls in parchment, and dress the room in cream and gold, but I think I've warmed it up further by bringing in the red and
